Commemorative Program

Charleston Area National Park Service Sites

As a steward of significant Civil War era battlefields and related sites, the National Park Service is a leader in the observance of one of America's most defining national struggles and the impact of that struggle on present-day America.

Through this observance, the National Park Service will provide the nation with an opportunity to reflect upon this momentous event. Collaborating with various partners and communities all over the nation, the National Park Service provides a great opportunity to touch millions of Americans including those who, with a little help, can find meaning where they thought there was none.

Fort Sumter National Monument is comprised of three sites: Fort Sumter, Fort Moultrie and Liberty Square. From April 9th through April 17th, special programs will be offered at all three sites that will provide visitors with an opportunity to explore and reflect on the meaning and relevance of the Civil War.

The Civil War Begins

History provides us with certain pivotal moments from which we can compare where we are with where we have been. The Civil War was one such moment and it continues to play a vital role in defining the United States as a nation. Fort Sumter is uniquely positioned to narrate and interpret this struggle: this is where the Civil War began.

Construction of the fort commenced in 1829. Ships from places as far away as Maine delivered 109,000 tons of rock and granite that were placed on a sand shoal at the mouth of Charleston Harbor to provide the fort's foundation. The fort stood 50 feet above the water's surface and covered an area of more than two acres. It had three tiers of gun emplacements, the first and second of which housed guns that were fired from enclosed rooms, known as casemates, through holes in the walls called embrasures. The upper tier of guns fired directly over the top of the fort's walls. Inside the fort were living quarters for the officers and enlisted men. Fort Sumter was built to hold 135 guns and 650 men but because the Civil War began before construction was completed it was never armed or manned as originally intended.

America's most deadly conflict lasted four years with over 620,000 deaths. Hostilities were ignited at Fort Sumter on April 12, 1861, when a complex chain reaction of social, economic and political events exploded into civil war. At the heart of these events was the issue of slavery.

Fueled by decades of disagreement and confrontation, South Carolina seceded from the Union on December 20, 1860. South Carolina's withdrawal from the Union was in protest of Abraham Lincoln's election as President and the subsequent fear of social and economic changes. With Fort Sumter as an unyielding bastion of Federal authority in South Carolina, war became inevitable.

When attempts to gain possession of the fort by peaceful measures failed and the arrival of Union resupply ships was imminent, Confederate Brigadier General Pierre G.T. Beauregard was ordered to seize Fort Sumter by force. On April 12, 1861, at 4:30 a.m. the first shot of the Civil War was fired from Fort Johnson. Confederate guns around Charleston Harbor shelled Fort Sumter during the next 34 hours from 12 batteries and fortifications. Union Major Robert Anderson's forces fought back to the best of their ability, but with only 85 soldiers and a limited supply of cartridge bags, Union forces could only fire a few guns at any one time.

On the second day of the fighting, Confederate shells set the fort ablaze. Unable to fight the fire and the Confederate forces at the same time, Major Anderson reluctantly surrendered the fort. Despite the fact that more than 3,000 shells were fired during this initial bombardment, no soldier on either side was killed in the fighting.

As a powerful symbol to the North and the South, Fort Sumter continues to be a memorial to all who fought and died to hold it.
